United Press Cablegram.

LISBON, Oct. 7.—The Portuguese Republic was virtually recognized today by all the foreign diplomats who, under the leadership of Sir Francis Villiers visited the new Foreign Minister Machado. The members made it plain they are not empowered to formally recognize the republic, but their action undoubtedly the forerunner of official recognition.

It is announced that the royal family will be exiled but its personal property will be respected. The cabinet has issued a bulletin saying reassuring messages have been received from the provinces declaring their loyalty to the republic. However, the entire army and navy are being held in constant readiness.

The "City Guard," which supported the King for two days, has joined the republic. The banks, stores, customs house and government departments have reopened.

Admiral Reiso, leader of the revolution, is reported to have committed suicide. The cause is not assigned.

The first connected account of the royal family's movements were obtained by the United Press today. King Manuel remained in the palace until the walls were crumbling, when he and his advisors were forced to flee through a secret passage. They went to Mafra, a northwest suburb.

The Queen and Dowager Queen were then at their summer home at Alcobaça. They took an automobile to Mafra. The Duke Osorio, resisting the revolutionaries, was defeated. He boarded the royal yacht Amoreira and sailed to Funchal, near Madeira. The yacht was repainted and disguised.

King Manuel was informed and with the women fled on horseback. Twenty Mafra Military School students acted as guards. A fish boat was taken to the yacht. It set sail and arrived at Gibraltar at 11 o'clock last night. The King and his mother were guests of the British Governor Sir Francis Forestor Walker.

Manuel is reported to have told the English correspondents today, "I won't attempt to regain the crown by a counter revolution. I will bow to the will of my people."

Madeira officially proclaimed a republic today.

England Eyes Colonies.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—It is taken for granted today that England will attempt to grab some of Portugal's rich colonial possessions but will not in conjunction with Germany. The colonies are the Cape Verde Islands, Portuguese Guinea, Prince and St. Thomas Islands, Angola, Portuguese East Africa, five small parcels of the China Islands of the Indian Archipelago. Angola is the largest, comprising 450,000 square miles.

The royal family of Portugal for years has been piling up investments in England and France which now amount to many millions. It is believed Manuel will eventually live in Paris.

Royal Salute for Manuel.

GIBRALTAR, Oct. 7.—King Manuel declared he will remain here until affairs become quiet. The American cruiser Des Moines and English ships Minerva and Newcastle fired the royal salute when Manuel returned to his yacht. It flew the Portuguese royal flags.

The warship left this afternoon for Gibraltar where trouble is believed to be imminent.

Thousands Reported Killed.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Dispatches from Hindu state that over a thousand persons were killed in Lisbon. It is believed this is exaggerated although it corresponds with the statements of passengers on the Austria, a Spanish steamer arriving from Lisbon at Vigo.

An official report to the foreign office confirms the press dispatches that King Manuel is at Gibraltar.

Barcelona Hot Bed.

BARCELONA, Spain, Oct. 7.—The Civil Guard, called only during the greatest emergencies, has had constant clashes for two days with revolutionary sympathizers. Scores of gatherings were dispersed and many persons injured. Similar conditions exist in other cities of Spain.

Dr. A. B. Kidd Elected Captain Of Company D. 10th Reg. N. G. P.

Dr. A. B. Kidd was unanimously elected Captain of Company D at a meeting of the company in the Army last evening. Dr. Kidd succeeds Captain Roy B. Koffler, who resigned the command of the company soon after the Gettysburg engagement. His was the only name presented at the election, which was conducted by Major L. P. McCormick.

Dr. Kidd has been a member of the company for a number of months and prior to coming to Connellsville he had considerable experience in the National Guard.

Captain Koffler's retirement was voluntary. He accepted the captaincy of the company only upon condition that he be permitted to resign after the engagement. In his retirement the company loses an efficient tactician and disciplinarian. Members of the company are enthusiastic over the prospects of a successful command on the part of Dr. Kidd.

With Their Big Contracts For Spans.

Construction work on the Western

Maryland is being pushed with a view to getting as far ahead as possible before bad weather sets in. This will not be possible to make the same progress during this winter as has been done for the past several months and the contractors are making the most of the excellent weather conditions that have prevailed from their standpoint. The rain which fell during last night and today will help matters

rather than hinder them.

Nay & McDonald, the bridge builders, have been making dirt fly in the vicinity of Confluence where they are constructing a big concrete viaduct.

During the last 10 days they have put down 3,000 cubic yards of concrete work, which is in big bunches of it.

Louis J. D'Isa has completed one portion of his contract, the cut and fill at Barnesville, and has moved his steam shovel across the Casselman where it is biting its way through

Owl Hill.

The work around Rockwood is well started and a big force is working between Rockwood and Garrett. Work has also been started on the large bridge at Salisbury Junction. Foley

Brothers and W. H. Wilkey Company are making rapid progress on their contracts. East of Mayordale the same good time is being made.

Between Confluence and Connellsville, all of the contractors are forging ahead with record breaking speed. All down the river gangs are busy grading, cutting and filling along the right of way. Exceptional time has been made by Louis Gallardi and W. S. Hill

Creek and Green Junction.

Precautions
at Mt. Braddock Against Diphtheria

The prevalence of an alarming number of diphtheria cases at Mt. Braddock has caused Dr. S. A. Baltz of that place to take extraordinary precautions to prevent a spread of the disease. Already several cases have been reported in the coke town and it is feared others will result.

Yesterday Dr. Baltz came to Connellsville and secured a supply of antitoxin which is supplied free by the State. Frank Huston of town is the distributor in this section for the State Health Department.

It is believed that liberal use of the serum will prevent a general epidemic of the disease and every precaution possible is being taken.

Sale of Thompson Coal to Standard Oil Company Denied by Mr. Thompson.

A report was received in Pittsburgh last night to the effect that Josiah V. Thompson of Uniontown, millionaire coal operator and banker, had disposed of his entire coal holdings in Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia. Most of it is said to have been bought at $10 to $100 per acre.

When questioned at his home in Uniontown last night Mr. Thompson said: "That's news to me. It is not true that I have disposed of my coal holdings to the Standard Oil Company or to any other company or individual."

Long in a state of dormancy because of a tie-up in the voting power of its stock between three great railroads, a great coal field of 90,000 acres in West Virginia, now valued at more than $20,000,000, is at last to be developed and its natural products will be sent out to the furnaces of the world with Pittsburgh as the outlet.

The firstinking financial Pittsburgh had of the recent plans for the development of this rich region was the master recommending a divorce on these grounds.

The couple were married in Cumberland on May 2, 1904. The plaintiff, who is 31 years of age, was formerly Miss Etta L. Campbell. Both reside at Balsinger.

Five months after their marriage the Hixenbaughs went to housekeeping, and kept house one week. That was the only time he would provide a home for her, she claims. There were three children, and the wife was forced to take in washing to support them, as their father would be absent for months at a time. He has never seen his youngest child, who is 10 months old. The defendant claims he has lived with the wife nine months since they were married.

A dairy breakfast was served by the chef, Joseph O'Bryan. It consisted of buns, hydant, water and more buns. The buns tasted not unlike the relic of the "buns" which landed the guests around the banquet table.

The bridge will be built up and now the road has to be torn up and the pipes taken out and a large stone arch placed so that the water can be carried off without disturbing the property of the people along the creek. When a heavy rain comes, the water would not rush back and fill the pillars of the houses whose lots faced the creek and during the last heavy rain the water stood on the doors of some of the houses in that vicinity, and the property owners prevailed upon the Council to remedy the matter, so at their meeting on Tuesday night the council let the contractor, A. FRIDAY EVENING, OCT. 7, 1910.

THE REJUVENATION OF THE LITTLE KANAWHA SYNDICATE.
The announcement that the Little Kanawha Syndicate has awakened to activity and that its 30,000 acres of coal will be developed shortly by the extension of the Monongahela River railroad, which is jointly owned by the Pittsburg & Lake Erie and the Pennsylvania railroads, indicates that the community of coke region railroad interest has been duly shaken by recent developments in connection with the extension of the Western Maryland to Connellsville.

While it is true that the Baltimore & Ohio owns 25% of the stock of the Little Kanawha Syndicate, the fact that its partners, the Pennsylvania and the Lake Erie, have joined together in building a railroad to the property is assured to be proof of the theory that these railroads have made an offensive and defensive alliance against the Baltimore & Ohio. If so we may expect to read another announcement soon to the effect that the B. & O. has disposed of its Little Kanawha holdings.

A feature of the Little Kanawha Syndicate which might be embarrassing unless otherwise arranged is its railroad ownership. The ownership and operation of coal mines by railroad has been declared unlawful, but it is possible that the ownership of the Little Kanawha property has been arranged to meet this requirement.

It must not be assumed, however, that the development of the Little Kanawha coal is an instantaneous proposition. Its owners are evidently preparing the way, but just when they will will in it has not been announced.

It is one thing to plan and another to execute. The coal and coke market is abundantly supplied just at present. Until there is a complete industrial recovery, there will be no need of new coal and coke operations, and the coke requirements will perhaps be properly taken care of by the opening up of the Greene county coal, which is practically at the feet of both the Pennsylvania and the Lake Erie railroads and which for coking purposes is superior to the Little Kanawha coal.

While the Connellsville region coke interests have no immediate interest in the development of the Little Kanawha Syndicate holdings, they have nothing to fear from them, and the bare statement that this great body of coal will be developed in the near future conveys a message of hope. It means that large financial interests back of it think they see a light and are preparing for a resumption of industrial activity.

A SUGGESTION FOR NATURAL GAS KICKERS.

As regards the remarks of The Courier yesterday concerning the legal status of the Fayette County Gas Company, that is to say whether it is such a public service corporation as is amenable to the reasonable demands of the consuming public for service at reasonable rates, the Mount Pleasant Journal says:

We have the opinion of James A. Murphy, of Pittsburgh, attorney for the Washington County Gas Co., which confirms The Journal's belief that this company, securing much of its supply in West Virginia, and selling the same in that state, is not a common carrier, but comes under the regulation, recourse to which would doubtless teach this young corporation a well deserved lesson and live up to its name. This could be done without disturbing the present pleasant (*²) relations existing between the company and its local consumers.

There may be some doubt as to whether the Fayette County Gas Company is a common carrier in the usual acceptation of the term, but there can be no doubt that it is a corporation doing an interstate business, or that it is a public service corporation enjoying certain franchises from the towns and supplying to the citizens a necessary domestic commodity.

The railroads of the Connellsville region, the trolley lines, the water plants, all are public service corporations enjoying certain privileges and amenable to certain obligations. They may not discriminate between communities or citizens, but must within the limits of their ability give everybody equal service at like rates.

If such corporations come under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the commission has power to revise their rates if they are not just and reasonable.

If the Fayette County Gas Company can be brought within the circle of Government regulation something will happen.

SCOTTDALE'S DILEMMA AND CONNELLSVILLE'S DANGER.
The discovery by the Scottdale authorities of four cases of typhoid fever on the banks of one of the small streams whence the town draws a portion of its water supply has caused serious apprehension and has been the cause of a warning to the citizens to boil all the water used for drinking and cooking.

It seems that no sanitary care has been taken of the excretions of these typhoid cases, and that in consequence the germs are quite likely to find their way into the water supply of Scottdale. The worst part of it is that this contamination may not manifest itself for weeks or months to come.

The President will take but little, if any, part in the various State campaigns this fall. He will spend most of his time at work on his message to Congress—News Item.

The experience of Scotland should be a warning to the health authorities of Connellsville to keep a vigilant supervision over the typhoid cases on Indian creek and other places along the Youghiogheny river where typhoid and kindred diseases develop.

The Courier has no desire to be carpingly critical of the Connellsville health authorities. It only wants to see the public protected against the dire consequences of a germ laden water supply which threatens epidemic and which may require months of patient and expensive endeavor to eradicate.

This is predominantly a case where, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

THE TEMPTATIONS OF FASHIONABLE BRIDGE.

Philadelphia's most fashionable society has discovered that a persistent prize winner at bridge parties had a habit of marking up her own score and there is much scandal in consequence.

Therein lies the chief if not the only reasonable objection to feminine bridge parties. Some time ago certain energetic reformers threatened to procure the arrest and indictment of fashionable society in Connellsville and Uniontown on the absurd charge of gambling, the basis of the complaint being that the hostesses gave prizes to their guests. The reformers very wisely thought better of it and the matter was forgotten.

The Philadelphia incident, however, is a reminder that sometimes doubts well or ill founded are expressed or implied at bridge parties closer to home concerning the validity of the scores, and it is a notorious fact that some players lose their temper and almost forget their manners in an insane desire to win the head prize, the same desire that prompted the Philadelphia woman of wealth and station to falsify her scores.

The reformers very wisely thought better of it and the matter was forgotten.

In the Littleton township damage case the water company was relieved of responsibility on the ground that it had employed a "competent" contractor who subsequently broke and went away the property of the plaintiff. If however, the "competent" contractor has been incompetent it has not the plaintiff right to sue him for damages. Under the law it can be shown that it was "the act of God" surely somebody is responsible to the ruined farmer for the loss of his crops and the damage to his property.

Diphtheria has added its threat to typhoid.

The Washington Observer informs us that it did not make the remark we attributed to it, that "the world may be coming to an end in his relations with the public schools but that this observation was made by the Keystone Citizen. We tender our apologies, but we stand by our comment, no matter who the author of the observation was."

WHERE IS THE WHITE WING?

He Was Voted for Over a Month Ago at Scottsdale

TO CLEAN PITTSBURG STREET

Filthy Day Brought Him Vividly to Mind—Davis and Mills Meetings Increase in Warmth—Another Large Pipe Contract Secured.

SCOTTDALE. Oct. 7.—Welcome rain came to end a most disagreeable day last evening. Being warm as summer, a close and oppressive air was made worse by a wind that blew all the day, carrying clouds of dust and dirt everywhere, and making the people run their eyes, after look about with bleared, blood-shot orbs. Most of the stores had to keep their doors shut yesterday and stand with that many of the merchants complained of goods being ruined by the dust and dirt that blew in. The storm whose goods were exposed on the outside sold quite a lot of dry street litter yesterday that had been carried by the wind and deposited on their goods. The long delay of White Wing would be a good thing on the streets. He could have saved a great deal of the dirt and filth that blew about. He was arranged for by Council over a month ago, but he has not appeared as yet. The newspapers were glorifying in the fact that a White Wing to clean Pittsburg street had been voted for, and it was believed that the long demanded cleanup for the street, that everyone sees, and that strangers remark frequently in the filthiest street they know of about here, was to have some relief. Neither the White Wing nor the little cars have yet appeared, and it does not look as if they will. Enough goods are spoiled every day by the dirt and dust blown from the streets to pay each merchant's share of employing a White Wing all the time for the business streets. The buying public, likewise, would get cleaner goods.

Another Good Contract.
The U. S. Cuit Iron Pipe & Foundry Company has secured another nice contract. Fairmont, W. Va., having awarded them the contract for 900 tons of water pipe for that city. The amount of the bid is over $19,000. Three weeks ago they got a contract for 14 tons of pipe amounting to $40,000 from Fairmont, Mo.

The Lights Were Out.

The Davis and Mills evangelistic meeting at the Presbyterian Church last evening was of usual interest to the large audience in attendance. The singing and other opening exercises as usual were attractive features and the sermon of Evangelist Davis gripped the audience with tremendous power. His subject was "Walking With God" in the course of which he said: "A person may know a great deal about the Bible and religion or pass through blessed religious experiences and yet not know what it is to walk with God. Walking with God means to be in the will of God to that extent that you are willing at all times to be what He wants you to be, to do what He wants you to do and to have what He wants you to have. A large number of our homes are nearer hell than heaven, because people have followed their own inclinations instead of finding out God's will in regard to choosing a husband or wife."

In the course of the sermon all the lights went out and the audience began singing a hymn. At the close the speaker continued by saying "that is like the experience of some of you. Your life was filled with light and happiness once, but you got out of the will of God and now you are groping around in the dark." Following the sermon he asked the audience to tell what they would like to see in Scottsdale and there was an eager response. One said "a large number of converted," another said "I would like to see Christians let their light shine every day instead of giving out at the critical time like the lights here tonight." Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock Evangelist Davis will give his famous address "Facts For Men to Face" which has created such a sensation in New York and other large cities.

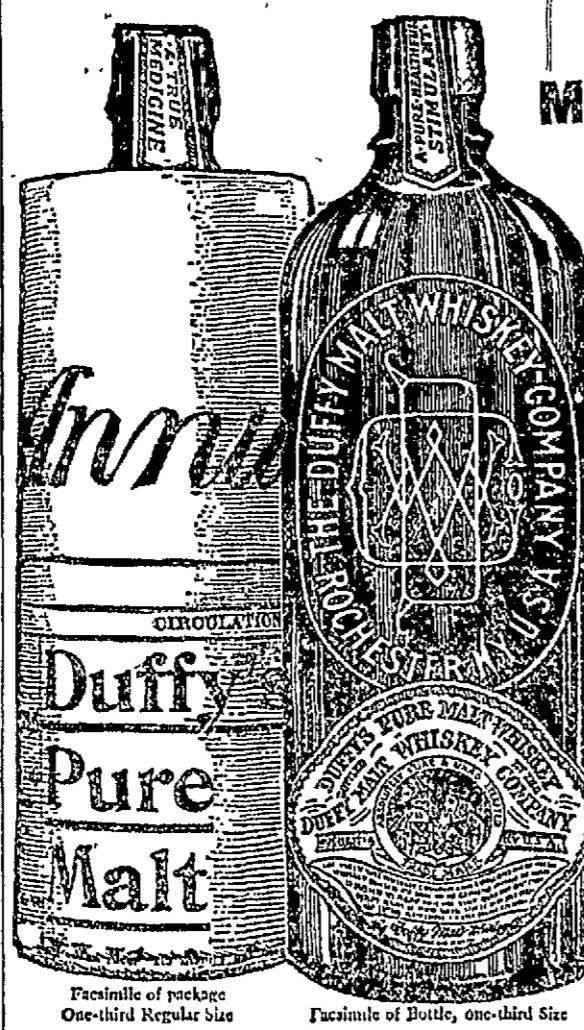

Evangelical Church.
On account of the Davis and Mills meetings the United Evangelical church, Rev. H. B. Sease, pastor, will hold their Christian Endeavor meeting on Saturday evening at 8 o'clock. This will be followed by prayer meeting. The Sunday services will be at 10:30, when there will be preaching. The Sunday school will be at 2 in the afternoon. There will be no services at the times named during the evangelical meetings.

One True Medicinal Whiskey

Beware of So-called Ones—Imitations

Unscrupulous dealers, mindful only of their profit and caring nothing for the health of their patrons, are offering for sale low grade mixtures, which they tell you are "as good as" Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

Some go so far as to try to make you believe it is Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. These cheap concoctions are foisted on the people with the intent to deceive.

When a remedy has been before the public for more than half a century, has been prescribed and used by the best doctors and in prominent hospitals, and has carried the blessing of health into so many thousands of homes as Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has, imitations are bound to arise. They may imitate the bottle and label only—no one can imitate the contents.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is an absolutely pure distillation of malted grain. Its palatability and its freedom from injurious substances render it so that it can be retained by the most sensitive stomach. It has been used with remarkable results in the treatment of consumption, pneumonia, grip, coughs, colds, malaria, fevers, stomach troubles and all wasting and diseased conditions.

It is sold in sealed bottles only. The Chemist's Head is on the label, and over the cork is an engraved seal. Be certain the seal is unbroken. Sold by druggists, grocers, dealers, or direct, $1.00 a large bottle.

Write Medical Department, The Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y., for doctor's advice and valuable medical booklet containing testimonials and common sense rules for health, both sent free.

WASHINGTON'S BIG DAY.

Centennial Industrial and Military Parade Held Yesterday.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Oct. 7.—With the biggest crowd ever seen in the town, century-old Washington yesterday celebrated its program along industrial and military lines. The parade, which was the chief feature, was a magnificent spectacle showing the growth of various industries from the pioneer days to the present time.

Starting at 10:30 o'clock, it was headed by Chief of Police W. J. Dulany and a squad of officers, followed by Chief Marshal Dunhill Hart and his staff. Next were several companies of the Tenth Regiment, N. G. P., formed by Colonel James E. Barnet, former commander of the regiment.

A bit of political significance was given to the celebration in the afternoon when shortly after 2 o'clock John R. Tener of Crispin, Republican nominee for governor, arrived in town accompanied by a large delegation of Charleroi citizens and a number of prominent politicians from Pittsburgh.

The candidate was taken to the court house, where he held an informal reception. In the following line were Congressman A. J. Batchfield of Pittsburgh; J. Frank McCay of Washington, Allegheny county chairman; Charles Matthews of New Castle, candidate for Congress in the twenty-fourth district; William G. Thurier of Washington, and A. H. Anderson, State senatorial candidate in the Washington Greene district. After shaking the hands of hundreds of centennial visitors, Mr. Tener went to the Republican headquarters where he met the party workers.

GRAFT SECRETS ARE REVEALED.

Beet Sugar Legislation Profitable to New York

SO WITNESS TELLS PROBERS

"In Appreciation of Their Aid in Passage of Sugar Bounty Legislation," Railns Was Handed $3,000, Burnett, $3,000, and Bettis $30.

New York, Oct. 7.—The modest ledger and two cash books of the Lyons Beet Sugar company, with the aid of only two witnesses, were more direct and conclusive in their narration of legislative graft than all that was revealed by the truck loads of books previously examined by the legislative graft hunt committee.

The witnesses examined in relation to the Lyon Beet Sugar company's legislative activities were Roland H. Miller and Harry F. Zimmerman, the former bookkeeper of the sugar company, and the latter its legislative agent.

After a three hours' examination Mr. Zimmerman's forgetfulness deserted him and he related the story of paying former senator, the late John Baline, $3,000 in cash; former Assemblyman John Laure Burnett, $3,000 in cash, and Charles H. Bettis, $300 in cash, all of these payments "in appreciation of their aid in the passage of sugar bounty legislation."

Baines, it was testified, received his package of cash in a committee room; Assemblyman Burnett received his in the assembly parlor, Bettis took his $300 in the Zimmerman hardware store in the village of Lyons.

Bettis Denies.

Lyons, N. Y., Oct. 7.—The testimony of Harry Zimmerman, erstwhile legislative agent at Albany of the Empire State Sugar company, given before the legislative graft committee, relative to paying State Committee Chairman Charles H. Bettis $300 for help in getting the sugar beet bounty bill through the legislature in 1905, was shown to Mr. Bettis last evening.

"I know," said Bettis, "that Zimmerman had given perjured testimony in the bankruptcy proceedings, but hardly believed he would dare testify to paying me anything. No money was ever paid to me directly or indirectly by Zimmerman or anybody else for what assistance I rendered."

Hundreds of horses and cattle were drowned in that neighborhood.

Interurban communication with Boonville and Newburg has been suspended. Trains are practically suspended on the Louisville and Nashville and Henderson routes and no trains were run at all on the Evansville and Indianapolis.

Would-be Assassin Prevented From Murdering Chinese Prince.

San Francisco, Oct. 7.—An attempt by George Fong to kill Prince Tsai I-tsun, uncle of the emperor of China, as he stepped from an overland train at the Oakland Mole, half an hour before boarding the liner Chiyu, was frustrated by Harry Moffit, a secret service operative, and Detective Sergeant George McMahon.

They seized Fong, a member of the Young China association, as he was about to draw a revolver to fire on the royal visitor.

Fong confessed his intention to assassinate Prince Tsai I-tsun. A loaded revolver was found in his pocket.

SOMERSET.

SOMERSET, Oct. 7.—Harry G. Spitzmire, proprietor of the Hotel Vanner, who sustained a fractured thigh bone in an automobile accident several days ago, underwent the operation of re-fracture of the bone by his physician last night. This operation was rendered necessary because of the failure of the broken bone to unite properly, which would have resulted in the shortening of the limb. The patient is resting well this morning. Andrew Swartz, who was also injured in the same accident, is now confined to his bed with a fractured bone in his knee and ankle. Since the accident he has been attending to his ordinary duties and only discovered that he had sustained a broken leg a day or two ago.

Spitzmire and four friends crusaded to a freight train standing in a crossing at Friedens about ten days ago, wrecked the machine and injured the driver. His injuries were so most serious, he having been caught by the steering wheel and the thigh bone was snapped.

Robert Augustine, an ex-County Commissioner, was severely injured and still unable to walk. The B. & O. railroad to bear damages in $325 for loss sustained by him by reason of the failure of the railroad company to properly repair and winterize a carload of coal he shipped to Connellsville to Ursina, Md., on August 21, 1909. One of the culps, valued at $200, died and one was badly injured causing the plaintiff to lose $125 in its sale.

CHAPTER XVII.
A PROPOSAL OF MARRIAGE.

After the restaurant was cleared and all outsiders gone Alexander remained, wandering about the room and discussing with Leo Cohen the sum he hoped to get from the company in which he was insured against fire.

The conversation ought to have been of absorbing interest to Cohen, as eventually Alexander's business would be his, provided there were no hitch in the marriage negotiations. Nevertheless, he was disengaged, for the now waiter had not yet left the premises, and the watchful Cohen had noticed a peculiar light in Ildora's eyes when her father had "brusquely ordered her upstairs, "out of the way."

She had offered no objection to going and had bidden Leo good night very prettily. But before tripping away she paused for an instant in the corridor, her face turned toward the kitchen in which P. Gordon was helping Black Dick put things to rights.

Cohen noticed this turn of the head, this furtive hesitation, standing as he did near the doorway now stripped of the red curtain. But when Ildora had vanished above Alexander dismissed Blinkie and the Post, shutting the door which usually stood open, because of the draft from the broken window.

"Why don't you send that man Gordon away, too?" Cohen asked.

"Because I'm payin' him big money, and he's got to earn it," explained Alexander. "He can stay and help Dick tidy up, if it takes till 12 o'clock. It ain't burlin' us. Why should you care?"

Even Cohen, who seldom erred on the side of timidity in speech, scarcely ventured to put into words the reason why he did "care."

Mentioned Ildora had been busy justifying her lover's worst fears.

As she reached the top of the staircase she heard the loud slapping of the door which had been warped and blistered by the heat. Her heart gave a little jump of excitement. Already she was keyed to a highly emotional state, and in her longing for a talk with Loveland along she was ready to run almost any risk. The unexpected shutting of the restaurant door caused her a tremor of delight. She slipped down again, with her heart laid on a hammer in her breast, and flitted softly into the kitchen, not daring to speak till she had quietly closed the door, also lest the sound of her voice should carry across the passage.

"Oh, Mr. Gordon," she breathed, "I'm so sorry about your poor hand! And your face is scorchin' too! I do wish you'd let me do something for you!" Loveland thanked her, but said that Dick had bandaged up his hand and wrist very nicely with a soothing application of lard on an oil rag.

Ildora gave a little sniff of scorn for the negro's milabolations.

"A pretty heritage," she sneered—"a nasty torn bit of coarse towell! And Iard ain't the right thing either. I've taken lessons in first aid. All the girls in my school did, and I ain't forgot what I learnt. Please come with me, and I'll do you up all right. Now, don't say no or you'll hurt my feelings. I feel ready to cry anyway, and I sure will if you ain't kind."

"Oh, I'll come," he said desperately and followed Ildora into the passage.

The parlor, which also served as dining room, was appalling in its bravado of old gold plush and portraits of dead ladies and gentlemen on a claret colored wall paper.

She made Loveland sit down in a leather armchair which smelled of the tobacco her father affected, and then, kneeling on a low footstool beside him, she began to unfasten Black Dick's clumsy bandage.

"I don't like to have you wait on me," said Loveland, who a few weeks ago took the most exaggerated potting for granted from pretty women.

"Well, I like to do it anyhow," replied the girl, with a lingering, liquid glance. "You're so brave. I'm proud to be waiting on you. I never knew anybody just like you before."

Loveland thought this very probable, but merely remarked, with becoming modesty, that he had done very little.

"You were a real hero," said Ildora. "Oh, ooh!" And she breathed little cooling sighs of pity at sight of the hero's burns. "I could cry over your poor hand. It's a shame!"

"Please do!" exclaimed Loveland, laughing. "I can't stand any more tears."

"Did you mind when I cried?" asked Ildora.

"Awfully!" said Loveland. As he spoke he smiled down at her in a friendly way, and the kindness in the blue, black-lashed eyes made the girl's heart flutter like an imprisoned bird. She had been in love with him since the first day, a little, then more and more. Now her love overflowed. It was too much for her emotional nature. She could not keep it back. And why should she try to keep it back, she asked herself, since her love must be considered as honor by this unsuccessful foreign adventure?

"I'm glad," she almost sobbed. "Oh, you're worth more to me than anything in the world. I won't cry again if you ask me not. I'll do whatever you want me to. Pa'd most kill me if he knew I was talkin' like this. But I don't care—I don't care for anybody but you—no one else. Oh, suppose I'd let ya make me marry Leo Cohen before I'd let you!"

Loveland was dumbfounded. "My dear girl," he exclaimed, "you don't know what you are saying!"

"I do know," Ildora broke in. "I know you are poor and in a lot of trouble, and you might have gone to prison. But you're a gentleman, all right. You're you, and that's enough. If you care about me the same as I do about you, why, all the rest!"

"But I—mean—I'm sure you don't really care," stammered Val, checking himself on the verge of saying something rude.

"I do care. You needn't be afraid," she assured him. "I wouldn't wait for you to speak if this had been different, but I saw how you felt by the way you ever looked a minute ago, and I wouldn't stop for manners, because, I say to myself, he's too much of a gentleman to tell a girl he loves her when he's get nothing and she everything."

"I hope I am too much of a gentleman to—" Val began desperately, but she cut him short with one little plump, patchouli-scented kiss over his mouth.

"I know it. That's what I said. You don't need to tell me," she hurried on. "We'll have to run away and get married. Then pa'll forgive me. I'm all he's got. He couldn't bear me to want for anything. But it's me now asking him this." He!

"Dear girl, I have no idea of asking him!"

"No, of course. You ain't so silly. His heart's set on my taking Leo, but I wouldn't touch him with ten foot pole now. My hero, I'll marry you tomorrow!"

"The devil you will!" said Alexander.

They stood together at the door, he and Leo Cohen, who had persuaded the old man at last on one excuse or another to invite him upstairs.

The girl struggled up from her knees, and as Loveland bounded out of the big chair she caught his arm, nestling against him.

"You villain! Stealin' my gal's love behind my back and entice her to run off with you!" stammered Alexander, purple with fury.

"I didn't—" began Val indignantly.

anorectic, wheezing asthmatically. "You just git."

"That's exactly what I'm anxious to do," said Loveland. "Goodby, Miss Alexander."

"Oh, you ain't leaving me forever!" cried the girl. "Pa, don't send him away like this. He—he ain't to blame." She hesitated, stammering. Then a wild longing to keep her lover at all hazards overcame fear and scruples.

"It was me who—" Loveland.

"Don't," said Loveland. "You can do no good. I shan't forget your kindness. We won't see each other again, but you must forget tonight and marry some man who can make you happy. Goodby once more."

And, pushing past Cohen, who hovered near the door, he sent the commercial traveler sprawling as he walked out of the room.

Black Dick, who had been told to guard the broken window of the restaurant in the master's absence, had heard all or most of the disturbance from the foot of the stairs, and he ran after Loveland to suggest the wisdom of getting money from Alexander.

"I'm a mighty wicked old man," whispered the negro. "You done a lot for him, an' now he kick you out o' home without wages."

"I shall never get a penny from the old beast. It's useless to try," said Loveland heavily, seeing a vision of homeward bound ships sailing away without him on board.

"Goodby, Dick. I wish I had something to give you to remember me by, but I haven't."

"Lawd, why I'm a rich man with money in de bank," protested Dick. "Do you think because I got a black face I take awful off you? No; on an odder hand, I lend you what you like, an' you pay me back when you like. You've treat me like a gemman."

Loveland thanked him, curiously touched, and as he refused the loan he found himself, somewhat to his own surprise, shaking hands warmly with the colored cook.

"Say, just look at this, my boy!" he exclaimed, his eye sparkling with excitement, as he pointed to a paragraph which he had marked with red ink from a bottle on the table.

"Wanted" was the attractive word which headed the paragraph, and that was what Val had expected, but as he read on he grew puzzled. "Wanted—for service work, juvenile leading man; must be tall; good looks; not over thirty; gentlemanly manners and appearance; slim figure; fashionable wardrobe on off stage; no boxers or leathers need apply. Write at once, inclosing photo and stating experience, age, weight and lowest salary."
